Non-Traditional Student Services

Spotlight on Student Services

Non-Traditional Student Services

The Office of Non-Traditional Student Services (NTSS) assists both on-campus and distance education students, providing support and advocacy for students before, during, and after their admission to K-State.

New NTSS director Suzanne Lueker, who was appointed in September 2008, understands the unique set of challenges that busy adult students face as they manage the many elements of their lives.

“Non-traditional students face challenges that their traditional counterparts do not face,” said Lueker. “They have the task of balancing family, career, and education.”

NTSS staff members can help distance students find balance by providing information and referrals in areas like admission, scholarships, childcare, housing, tutoring, refresher and study skills courses, health insurance, community programs, and other student issues and concerns.

“We’re here to provide accessibility to resources and information for all K-State students,” Lueker said.

The NTSS website provides distance students with many valuable resources, including information on scholarships specifically offered to non-traditional students, financial aid, tips for selecting childcare programs, and answers to frequently asked questions.

Meet the Interim Provost

Ruth Dyer
Interim Provost
Kansas State University

Dr. Ruth Dyer, Associate Provost and Professor of Electrical and Computer Engineering, has been appointed Interim Provost at Kansas State University.

As Interim Provost, Dr. Dyer serves as the chief academic officer, a member of the executive administration, and a member of the President's cabinet. She is a representative of the President and serves during the President's absence.

Dr. Dyer served as Assistant Provost since 2000 and Associate Provost since 2004. There, she oversaw K-State's offices of planning and analysis, assessment, and summer school. She coordinated the university's mentoring program for women and minorities in science and engineering as well as academic initiatives with the Kansas Board of Regents.
